Level of Care
Detoxification (detox)-- medical intervention that manages an individual safely through the process of acute withdrawal.
Outpatient - structured substance abuse treatment that typically incorporates counseling with substance abuse education and group participation. Outpatient care averages less than 9 hours per week. Intensive outpatient (IOP) involves minimum of 9 hrs/week.
Residential - individual lives at the treatment facility and participates in day and evening treatment and support activities. Programs are often 28 or 30 days, but may involve longer lengths of stay (e.g., 90 days, 6 months or even 2 years).
Inpatient -- hospital-based and medically managed treatment; the most intensive therapeutic option.
Intervention - a specific and orchestrated process to compel the individual to "get help" for addiction. Individuals who lead the process are trained as interventionists.
